Queensland training sector to benefit from new skills agreement

The Australian Council for Private Education and Training (ACPET) has congratulated the Queensland Government for signing up to the Prime Minister’s “Skills for All Australians” reforms at last week’s COAG meeting, with the peak body saying the State’s economy and industry will be the better for it.

The reform package, first announced by Prime Minister Gillard last month, will see Queensland’s Vocational Education and Training (VET) students receive guaranteed government subsidised training to Certificate 3 level, a HECS-style loan scheme for students at Diploma and Advanced Diploma level, and greater choice between private and public institutions through new contestable funding arrangements.

ACPET CEO, Claire Field, said opening up Queensland’s training sector to competition between providers was in the best interests of students, institutions and employers alike, and she added that similar reforms in Victoria and South Australia have already been implemented with great success.

“The time is right for the Queensland Government to implement vital skills reforms, which have been proven to deliver increased student numbers, greater student satisfaction and a more industry-responsive training sector,” Ms Field said.

Ms Field said private and not-for-profit vocational training providers in Queensland already had a good track record of delivering employment related training, and opening up the State’s training sector to a more diverse range of providers would allow students to choose between a greater range of high quality providers.

“Queensland’s private VET providers have an outstanding record of getting graduates jobs, with 74.2% of students in employment related training getting a job when they complete their studies,” Ms Field said.

“Private providers are also performing well at meeting the broader equity and access goals of training, with 69.7% of female graduates gaining employment, along with 65.2% of those who speak a language other than English at home and 44.6% of those with a disability were employed.”

“The COAG is right to push for consistent national training reforms that are good for students, employers and governments alike. The added incentive of more than $1.8billion in funding for the Queensland Government to introduce the reforms make this a real win-win for the State: a better training sector and more federal funds to operate it.”

“I applaud the Queensland Government for tapping into the potential of a high quality, diverse and contestable training sector,” Ms Field said.

Claire Field is available for comment.
Media Contact: Ben Eade, 0406 641 881