ACPET fostering educational entrepreneurship with its inaugural Executive Retreat

The Australian Council for Private Education and Training (ACPET) is proud to announce its inaugural leadership executive retreat, which starts in Sydney today with a select group of Australia’s top private education and training leaders.

Over two sharply focussed days, these executive leaders are working intensively with Australia’s top influencers in educational leadership and change to learn how to drive their educational vision for their organisation to new successes and leadership in Australia and internationally.

‘In pioneering this first-of-its-kind, professional development event for ACPET, we are addressing the growing need for high-level educational leadership development support for existing and emerging leaders in tertiary education and training across Australia,’ said Ms Claire Field, ACPET’s Chief Executive Officer.

The participants, all busy and in-demand CEOs of highly regarded, high quality multi-million dollar private education and training organisations, are exemplars of Australia’s existing and potential global leadership and innovation in private post-compulsory education today and into the future.

ACPET offers these leaders a unique opportunity to come together in an environment of mutual trust and support, to explore the big issues that affect them and their organisation in today’s competitive education landscape.

The event presenters and facilitators are sharing their expertise in educational and business leadership and their own journeys to make this a challenging, deep-impact and highly practical learning experience. Top educator, entrepreneur and executive coach Bill Lang of The Human Performance Company is setting the tone for the event, which is being led over the two days by highly respected educational facilitator, Jacqui Martin of Sodona Consulting Group.

Claire Field is bringing her high-level knowledge and position at the centre of Australia’s tertiary education space to share her insights on the post-federal election and post-APEC Summit state of play and what this means for the participants and their organisations as they plan for the future.

Brian Wexham, experienced media director with executive roles with The Times and The Sunday Times in London, Lonrho Media Group in East Africa and APN Educational Media (Australia and New Zealand), is also sharing his insights of working as one the big guns shaping today’s media landscape.

Ms Field said, ‘this sharply focussed, practical and fun event is helping educational leaders to identify and project their entrepreneurial vision to make their organisations flourish, contribute to strengthening Australia’s post compulsory education and training sector and foster Australia’s leadership in educational entrepreneurship’.
